An interesting revival is in progress in the Prosbyterian society in Champlain, N. Y. Bisbop Hopkins, of Vermont, confirmed a large class of candidates of the Congregation of St. John's Church, in Washington, last Sunday evening March 2d.

Rev. Moses Marston has resigned the charge of the Universalist Society at Woodstock, in order to accept a call to Potsdam,

About thirty conversions among the students of Yale College are reported.

At O wego, New York, one hundred hap tisms in the Baptist Caurch are reported, and at Franklin, N. Y., there have been over one hundred conversions.

Congressional Leadership. There is much just appreciation of charncter, and of the situation in Congress, in the tollowing article from Harper's Weekly: Among the living etatesmen of this country there is none who commands profounder popular confidence than William Pitt Fessenden, Senstor from Maine. Absolute anserting the sense of the profound of the profo tegrity, a certain antique severity of character and oug him sometimes impatient and almost perdiant in opposition to rhetoric and sentimentality, great eagacity, catholic com-prehension, strict fidelity to the fundamental principles of the Government, and a singularly char and concise oratory, are qualities which are apparent to every man who warehes his career. No man surpasses him in that just estimate of practicability which is the test of statesmanship. The duty of a legislater is to know what is possible and to do it. It is to make six or eight, if you can not seem ten. It is to take the half loaf rather than to lose the whole.

In the Senate delates, Mr. Fessenden is always conspicuous for an incisive good sense, which is the rarvet as at is the most excellent quality of a Senster. In opposition be is always tensorable, speaking to the merits of the special case, and not planting bunself approximate ractions. Quick to defend and explain the prorogative of the body in which he sits, he neither traduces nor defies his opponents. His advocacy of measures is more effective because it is not rancorous in rhetoric nor discursive in argument, but firm, procent, and pointed. There is no man in Corgress whose judgment is truer, whose discretion is more absolute, or whose conviction is sincerer. If there were any conspicuous and distinctive lender in the Senate he would be the man ; and that, with his peculiar powers be is not confessedly the leader, is due rather to temperament than to any other cause. Unquestionably Mr. Fessenden represents the patient common sense of the Union party in this country. He knows that the difficul-ties of the situation are to be surmounted not by vituperation and crimination, not by petty jealousies or lofty moral indignation, but by tranquit firmness and homest argument. He does not propose an ideal reconstruction; which is sure to be baffled by events, nor an increasing and blind submission to chances which are calculable. Different proposed in the chances which are calculable. fering upon some points with the President. he does not accuse his smoority; and con-vinced that certain conditions of reorganization are indispensable, he neither exasper-ates nor flatters the late rebel population.— Had the action of Congress in both Houses been in-pired by such a spirit much of the gravity of the situation would have been avoided. Sounder health, a more cheerful temperament, and greater ambition and self esteem would have made Senator Fessenden a more conspicuous chief, but they could not make him a more useful legislator. A total contrast to Senator Fessenden is Mr. Fluiddeus Stevens, who has been permitted by the House of Representatives to take the position of a leader. Mr. Stevens has no single quality of a statesman, except strong sparing, vehement, vindictive, loud for the rights of conquerors, intolerant of opposi-tion, and as absolutely incapable of fine discrimmation and generous judgment as a lo-comotive of singing. Of a pleasant humor and personal kindliness, he is no more fitted for the task of reconstruction which develves upon Congress than a jovial blacksmith to repair a watch, or a "butcher to take up hidden arteries and sondered veins in the very region of the heart." Yet a Congress which is undoubtedly one of the ablest that was ever assembled has quietly allowed itcell to be almost a puppet in the hands of such a man and at such a time. The consequence is that Mr. Stevens's crude and rash talk is supposed to be the voice of Congress. A legislator who undertakes to regulate the price of gold by law, is the tacitly acknowledged chief of a body of practical business men. A representive who sneers at the press is a permitted leader in a party created and The evident mischief of allowing Mr. Stevens to be the exponent of the House is, that his words and ways are naturally supposed by the people of the late rebel. States to indicate the disposition of the dominant party of the country. Those people at once conty is the mainspring of the Union policy. They instinctively resist. Seeing the President and Mr. Stevens at issue, they strenuously support the President. That support again puts the President in a false position, of which he and all honest men are fully conscious, and he raturally does not feel pleasantly toward the agencies which have placed him there. We insist that Mr. John-son has reason to be hurt and indignant when he is represented as the friend and ally of red-handed rebels. Has he given no proof of fidelity to the Government? Because holds views of reorganization which may appear to be very hazardous to the welfare of the Union, is he therefore to be accused of treachery? Because the President expresses his opinion, is he to be charged with usur-pation? Yet Mr. Savens makes the charge, and the House is silent. It is one of the murvels of time that no man known as a radical has vindicated the party and the country against Mr. Stevens. The opposition of gentlemen like Mr. Ray-mond and Mr. Davis of this State does not avail. In public estimation they stand where "the King's friends" stood in the early days of George Taird. Yet nothing is more certain than that the calm good sense where "the King's friends" stood in the carly days of George Third. Yet nothing is more cortain than that the caim good sense of the great Union party has strongly condemned the views and policy of Mr. Stevens. His own instinct assured him of it in advance, and he said so in the first speech he made during the session, when he declared that he spoke for himself alone. It is as true news at was then. The work of retrue now as it was then. The work of reorganization is blended of firmness and

We would call the attention of the public to the merits of this Machine, as seen in constant operation at our calcaroom, believing that it needs but to be understood to come into very general use with all who appreciate the value of a first rate gas light, which can be obtained at a cost met exceeding that of the light obtained from Kernesnes Oil.

Many ingrelous methods have been adopted for manufacture their own gase, enabling individuals to manufacture their own gase, enabling in these methods involves a large the sentirulism of the works and outlay, for the constant care and no buildings to contain them: a constant care and no buildings to contain them: a constant care and nappy to say that by the say of these objections.
